

Can the Union Shop allow students to heat their own food in the microwave?

---

Proposed by: Nimat Choudhury

Seconded by: Sahra Yusuf

What do you want?

I recently found out that students cannot heat their own food with the microwave in the Union Shop, and can only heat food that is bought from the union shop. I think this is a problem because I'm sure numerous students bring their own food to campus for many reasons, and not being able to heat it up to eat a warm meal seems unpleasant, especially as we have now entered Winter.

Why do you want it?

I would like this changed, as when I was first told about this, I was very surprised and ended up eating a cold lunch, which ideally would've been much better if it was warm, if not hot.

What impact will this have?

Having this microwave policy changed would mean students are able to eat their own food warm or hot if they want to. During colder days, hot food is much more preferred for obvious reasons, for many students, and allowing students to heat their own food can benefit them if they bring their own food in order to not buy more food, as small costs everyday quickly add up.